5. KNOWLEDGE, SKILLS AND ABILITIES

Describe the level of knowledge, experience and abilities that are required for satisfactory job performance.

Knowledge identifies the acquired information or concepts that relate to a specific discipline. Skills describe acquired measurable behaviours and may cover manual aspects required to do a job. Abilities describe natural talents or developed proficiencies required to do the job.

These requirements are in reference to the job, not the incumbent performing the job.

The incumbent must have the ability to read and write professional reports.

Preferred skills include the ability to: assess issues and situations, interview clients, facilitate change, cultural sensitivity and awareness, general counseling of clients, community development strategies, human development basics, crisis intervention, and program development/evaluation.

The minimum requirement for this position is: Diploma in Social Work plus 1 year child protection experience. However, a Bachelor's Degree in Social Work from a recognized university along with 1 year child protection experience is preferred.

Equivalencies are considered as an acceptable combination of education and practical experience that may include a Diploma in social work or a Degree in social work or the social sciences with transferable education and experience suited to generic Social Services Programs.

A class 5 drivers license or ability to get one within four (4) months from beginning employment in this position is a requirement.

It is a requirement of this position to obtain and maintain a Child and Family Services appointment

Ability to speak Inuktitut or Inuinnaqtun is an asset.

Highly Sensitive Position; Vulnerable Sector Check Required (VSC)

6. WORKING CONDITIONS

List the unavoidable, externally imposed conditions under which the work must be performed and which create hardship for the incumbent. Express frequency, duration and intensity of each occurrence in measurable time (e.g. every day, two or three times a week, 5 hours a day).

Child protection and associated programs force the incumbent to work closely (and most times independently) with dysfunctional, violent and at times suicidal clients or parents of clients. At times the work will create public criticism which can create stress for some individuals. Given the isolated nature of Nunavut’s communities there is a great likelihood of client/worker interaction during non-work time.

The incumbents ability to deal with stressful situations, the ability to seek out appropriate supports (i.e. debriefing) and the ability to maintain a personal balance are vital to the incumbent’s ability to fulfill the duties outlined for this position.

On call services are a requirement of this position.

It is a requirement of this position that the incumbent pass statutory training and maintain a Child and Family Services appointment.

Physical Demands

Indicate the nature of physical demands and the frequency and duration of occurrences leading to physical fatigue or physical stress.

Involvement in case management may be at times intense and/or unpleasant. Client contact can be difficult. Clients can be angry, abusive and presenting a situation which often makes communication difficult. Given the isolated nature of most of Nunavut’s communities the community social service worker may be required to respond to most crises situations in the community. The length and number of crises interventions increases the possibility of these long periods of stressful situations having a detrimental effect on the workers physical health.

The incumbent may encounter long periods of sitting at meetings or at a computer work station. Proper precautions should be taken to ensure a healthy work regime.

The ability to physically negotiate obstacles (steps, snow, ice, debris) while entering peoples homes and walking through the community is required.

Being on call over a sustained period leads to sleep disruption which affects how one feels. The daily tasks are daunting in this field and it is easy to feel physically drained at the end of the day.

Environmental Conditions

Indicate the nature of adverse environmental conditions to which the jobholder is exposed, and the frequency and duration of exposures. Include conditions that increase the risk of accident, ill health, or physical discomfort.

The nature of this work is unpredictable and often crises driven and disruptions will be frequent. The ability to constantly prioritize a workload will be considered an asset.

The working environments will fluctuate between office times and work in the client homes and community. In the conduct of case management, the incumbent may periodically be exposed to potential verbal and/or physical abuse. The worker must be aware of how to appropriately deal with these situations.

The weather in Nunavut can be quite extreme. Proper attire suitable to the wide range of temperatures and conditions is required.

The incumbent may be required to travel: weather and airline delays are common in the North.

Sensory Demands

Indicate the nature of demands on the jobholder’s senses. These demands can be in the form of making judgements to discern something through touch, smell, sight, and/or hearing. It may include concentrated levels of attention to details though one or more of the incumbents’ senses.

Long hours of reading and using computers imply risk associated to eyestrain, however the incumbent is required to maintain excellent judgment and decision- making skills because of the direct impact (on clients) of that judgment. Likewise, where the incumbent is directly involved in case management, reading ‘body language’ becomes critical and may be tested by other mental and emotional demands on the incumbent’s energies.

Mental Demands

Indicate conditions within the job that may lead to mental or emotional fatigue that would increase the risk of such things as tension or anxiety.

Long hours in intense situations (for example, where the incumbent is directly involved in case management) may cause mental and/or emotional fatigue. Sometimes family or community demands create a great deal of mental stress.

Given the above stated and acknowledging the amount of reading and production of written material associated with this profession, mental fatigue is common.

As most cases deal with feelings, pain, regret, loss etc. it is easy for a worker to internalize and feel the same emotions as the client. In some instances this can be helpful but it can also lead to a feeling of hopelessness and depression. The ability to seek out the appropriate supports as and when required is a definite asset.
